Arbeit macht frei

...Everyone entering the gates of Auschwitz concentration camp in the 1940's could not escape reading that phrase arching above the camp main gates. The rough translation: "Work will make you free" was really nothing more than a psychological cruelty inflicted on the prisoners of the camp. There was no chance that work would ever set them free. Some tried to gain their freedom by trying to escape via the electrified barbed wire fences, an impossible challenge. Some may have tried to purchase their freedom through bribery, a mistake. All in all, work never did win anyone freedom at Auschwitz. The only way out prior to the liberation of the camps was through the chimney stack. Others, such as St. Maximilian Maria Kolbe, obtained freedom in the starvation chamber in the basement of one of the buildings — then, with the help of a lethal injection to move things along.

God worked when he created, as recorded in the Book of Genesis. His work was a labor of love because creation was not a necessary part of the essence of God — or was it? I'm not a theologian, so I won't venture to take sides. Some might say that God had to create of necessity, that love being his essence demanded that of him. Others might say that he could have passed on the whole deal and remained happy as a clam. But he did work. He did create. His works were created in wisdom out of the love which is his essence, being and becoming a marriage unfathomable to our minds.

All human beings do some type of work. Some get fair compensation for their labor. Others work in sub-standard conditions throughout the world, filling the shelves of some stores here and abroad, even providing income for those who kill our own on the battlefields the world over. But I digress. The reality is that we all do work. Unlike the sarcastic 'welcome banner' at Auschwitz, work can actually provide a certain freedom for people, as long as it does not enslave us in the process, deprive us of our humanity or destroy our family life in exchange for the almighty dollar.

This weekend we celebrate the gift of work, the opportunity for us to create and to express, to become free and to love, to be reflections of the Supreme Creator. Many of us will gather here to thank God for that privilege, and many of us will mirror his example and take time out of the day to also rest. We can only hope that everyone in the world can feel the same sentiment some day, working in freedom, creating in love and giving the Creator the praise due him. Happy Labor Day!!!!

Labor in Love

This weekend we are celebrating Labor Day, which President Grover Cleveland instituted in 1894 to honor the work force of America. As one newspaper put it: “While it holds special significance for labor unions, who like to remind the country of the many contributions they have made, it is also a time to honor the labor contributions of all workers. Labor Day has been a time to celebrate the causes of the Labor movement, its struggles and its sacrifices to improve the working conditions and pay. And certainly we should do that today. But it is also a fitting time to reflect upon the many struggles labor and business face today—problems and issues that threaten jobs and may serve to erode the benefits, pay and America’s standard of living in a world marketplace marked by growingly fierce competition. It is also a good time to think about those who want to work but can’t find jobs and those who are mired in welfare.... Today, we not only salute the contributions of the Labor movement, we also invite you to reflect on labor itself.”

The Church celebrates “labor” in her liturgy on Monday. More properly put, the Church celebrates God, the laborer, who shares His work with his creatures. God is love and His work is always love. Whatever God does is out of love and for love. God then shares his work of love with his creatures, which are sustained by God’s love and which are share love with other creatures.

In the book of Genesis God is presented as a worker or laborer who fashions His creation by word and deed. After six work days of creating, God rests on the seventh day to evaluate His work. God bids human beings to do the same, that is, to rest on the seventh day, to stop their work, marvel at it, regenerate themselves and give thanks, to God, who enables human beings to take part in His work of building a universe of love.

The highlight of God’s work is Jesus, the Father’s only begotten Son, the expression of the Father’s love, who unites the divine and the human in perfect harmony. As God’s prime work Jesus is the exemplar of what the human being’s work should be. Put it the most simple terms: whatever the human being does — whatever work the human being engages in — should be a labor of love and for love.

Sometimes human beings — even Christians — forget or disregard love in their work. They tend to view work as a job that needs to be done from which they make money to be used to buy material goods, which in turn become a substitute for love. Love is a relationship between and among human beings. No “things” can substitute a relationship which primarily is spiritual in nature and in which, strictly speaking, only human beings can engage. That is why a primary work for the Christian is to pray, that is, to engage in a daily relationship with God. That is why going to Church every Sunday to celebrate the Eucharist is a very important and necessary work in order to relate with the community of persons who are called to work together and become strengthened at the Mass by Jesus and His work of salvation. That is why visiting the sick and the elderly members of the community, especially on Sunday, the day of rest, is important to strengthen the relationship with them

Every human being has a right and duty to labor in love— no matter what the age or circumstances. May each of us use that right and exercise that duty.

Lekarstwo na pyche i zazdrosc

W swiecie przyrody trwa zacieta walka o byt. Podobne zmaganie mozna obserwowac wsród ludzi. Różnica jednak polega na tym, że w przyrodzie silniejszy wygrywa, a slabszy uznaje się za pokonanego, tymczasem wsród ludzi slabszy rzadko kiedy rezygnuje z dalszej walki i umie się pogodzić ze swoim miejscem. Sama w sobie, ta cecha jest pozytywna. Dzięki temu mogliśmy jako naród odrodzić się po 123 latach niewoli.

Jednak w pewnych sytuacjach ta niezgoda na przegrana może być zła. Kiedy? Kiedy ktoś pokonany w uczciwej walce sięga po bardzo nieuczciwe środki, by zrewanżować się. Kiedy nie może wygrać, to przynajmniej pragnie zaszkodzić zwycięzcy. W takich sytuacjach najbardziej mnie przeraża taka „bezinteresowna złośliwość”, kiedy człowiek nie odnosi żadnej osobistej korzyści z czyjejs krzywdy; kiedy jedynym motywem jest chęć zaszkodzenia drugiemu, a jedyna „korzyścią” szatanska radość, kiedy to się uda.

Zródłem tego dazenia jest pycha, czyli chorobliwie ustawiona ambicja, a z drugiej strony kompleksy, czyli nieumiejętność dostrzeżenia własnej wartości. Spowodowane jest to ciągłym porównywaniem się z innymi. Konsekwencją jest zazdrość. Czasem zdarza się, że człowiek zazdrości drugiemu, a w tym samym czasie ten drugi zazdrości pierwszemu.

Człowiek pyszny i zazdrośny jest niezadowolony z tego, co posiada. Nie umie cieszyć się tym, kim jest sam z siebie ani tym, co posiada. Z drugiej strony czuje się nieszczesliwy widząc tego „drugiego” i to, co on posiada. Chodzi tu zarówno o dobra materialne, jak i o dobra duchowe, jak uzdolnienia, wykształcenie, dobre imię, powodzenie, itp.

Pycha i zazdrość to groźne choroby ludzkiego ducha. Jedyna szansa wyrwania się z nich jest zawarta w odkryciu i umiłowaniu prawdy o sobie. Aby to jednak mogło nastąpić, człowiek musi zrezygnować z porównywania siebie z innymi i zmierzyć się wprost i bezpośrednio z Bogiem, np. czytając Psalm 139. Są tam m.in. takie słowa: „Ty bowiem utworzyłeś moje nerki, Ty utkałeś mnie w łonie mej matki. Dziękuję Ci, że mnie stworzyłeś tak cudownie, godne podziwu są Twoje dzieła.”

Co czujemy czytając te słowa? Czy zgadzamy się z Autorem? Czy potrafimy odnieść te słowa do siebie? Każdy z nas jest właśnie taki w oczach Pana Boga, czyli kims jedynym i wyjątkowym. Nikt inny w całym świecie nie jest taki sam jak my. Każdy z nas jest chciany i kochany przez Pana Boga, taki jaki jest. Kiedy te prawdy przyjmujemy w głębi serca, to wtedy zrozumiemy też, jak niewłaściwa i głupia jest każda zazdrość i każdy objaw pychy.

Przeciwnościem pychy jest pokora. Pokora to staniecie w prawdzie przed Bogiem. A jest to prawda wspaniała, świadomość, że jesteśmy kochani przez Pana Boga. Jesteśmy kochani nie dlatego, że na to zasługujemy, ale tylko dlatego, że Bóg jest Miłością. Kiedy będziemy czuć się kochani przez Boga, kiedy przyjmujemy się tacy, jacy jesteśmy, wtedy potrafimy przyjąć nawet to ostatnie miejsce.

ST. STANS HISTORICAL FACT
by Rob Jagelewski.

From 1880 to 1890, our Polish settlement known as "Warszawa" spawned two satellite Polish communities. One of these was established south of Warszawa across the ravines at Harvard Avenue and Ottawa Road. This was primarily located at the city limits at Marcelline Avenue (East 71) and Grant Avenue. The area was known as "Krkowa." The residents either farmed small plots of land or worked in area industries. Many residents kept poultry. The large number of geese in the area also had this area acquire the name, "Goosetown." Sacred Heart of Jesus Parish was created for this community in 1889. The other community was located near Todd Street (East 65) and Francis Avenue. The Poles who settled in this area were probably employed at Empire Plow or in other area industries. This area relied on our parish for their religious needs until 1907 when St. Hyacinth Parish was created. The formation of these two parishes helped to relieve the overcrowding at our parish during those years.

PRAY FOR OUR MILITARY the following parishioners are serving our country and ask for your prayers. David Sklodowski is with the Army and is serving in Baghdad at this time. Tom Lechner USN is serving in Iraq.
