We strive to bring the joy of the gospel and imitate Jesus through compassion, mercy and love, especially for the poor and marginalized. We seek to be faithful stewards providing a heart and home for all.

We Welcome All Visitors to Our Celebration

A MESSAGE FROM OUR PRIESTS

Father Joseph, Father Louis and Father Albino

It seems that all things on earth have its opposite. For instance, we have male-female, day-night, love-hate, heaven-earth and etc.

The gospel this Sunday deals also with opposite things and it limits to (beatitudes-woes) spoken by the Lord Jesus. There are two groups of people which Jesus presents to us this Sunday, the people who are blessed and the people who are pronounced woe. What make people blessed and woes are not based on what their status in life are, but it based on what each one does good or evil in the sight of God.

If we want to be counted among those Jesus called blessed then we have to maintain our deep rootedness and connectedness to God through our prayer, kindness, and holiness in life.

ASK A CATHOLIC

If the Eucharist is really Christ, shouldn't it heal sick or wounded people who receive it?

Not necessarily. By that reasoning, the sacrament of baptism should accomplish the same thing, because we receive God in his divinity—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit—in receiving baptism. And while baptism washes away our sins and gives us the gift of sanctifying grace—and there is nothing greater than that—the healing of sick or wounded people typically doesn't accompany reception of baptism.

Similarly, in the Eucharist, we receive Jesus Christ in his divinity as well as his glorified body, blood, soul, and divinity, but physical healings don't typically accompany reception of the Eucharist. And yet, again, we receive an increase of sanctifying grace and grow closer to our Lord Jesus, and so we truly experience a foretaste of heaven.

The last degree of love is when He gave Himself to us to be our Food; because He gave Himself to be united with us in every way.

Article: Contraception

By Nate Guyear (Part 5 of 9)

Statement: “If contraception is wrong because it’s a way to have sex and not have children, then natural family planning (NFP) is also wrong because it’s a way to have sex and not have children.”

Answer: Contraception is not wrong because it’s a way to have sex and not have children. The majority of sexual encounters do not result in children. It’s wrong because intentionally taking contraception is a willful act designed to frustrate the total union of man and woman during sexual intercourse. It is the purposeful withholding of one from the other. The remote (or distant) end for a contraceptive act is to prevent a child from being conceived. However, the proximate (more immediate) end, whether intended or not, is the prevention of total unity during sexual intercourse. Contraception turns the sexual act into a selfish pursuit of pleasure, rather than a loving embrace. Further, it destroys the order toward which sexual activity is directed (ref. Article 3 of this series). NFP, however, allows a husband and wife to engage in sexual intercourse without barriers. Thus, since the couple is always open to life and there’s a complete sharing of their persons with one another during sexual union, NFP could not be classified as a contraceptive or some equivalent. There is nothing immoral about a husband and wife having sex when the wife is infertile and there is nothing immoral about a husband and wife being continent during periods of fertility. No moral law demands that a married couple have sex during every fertile period or abstain from sex during infertile periods.

Those who defend contraception, especially for use by married couples, label the hoped-for benefit (spacing out of children) as good. Yet, the object chosen to reach the intended end is ignored or labeled as good, simply because the end is good. The end, therefore, justifies the means, according to these people. This same logic could be used to justify abortion and infanticide, i.e. abortion and infanticide also allow married couples to space out children. “Contraception is always seriously wrong because it is always gravely immoral to adopt by choice the proposal to damage, destroy, or impede the good of human life.” With NFP, however, both the object (rhythm method, etc.) and end are morally good. NFP allows complete unity and openness to human life in every sexual act and every sexual act using NFP is ordered toward procreation even if conception is never realized. Further, when a married couple decides to increase the likelihood of having children, NFP can help them determine the most opportune time for intercourse, something contraception clearly cannot do.

Note on chemical contraceptives: Chemical contraceptives (the pill, IUDs, etc.) can cause abortions and are, thus, commonly referred to as abortifacients. Chemical contraceptives work in the following way: First, synthetic hormones stop the ovaries from releasing an egg. Second, they thicken cervical mucus making it difficult for sperm to live or move. Third, they thin the lining of the endometrium. If the pill fails to prevent the ovaries from releasing an egg and the sperm from reaching the egg, the egg is fertilized, and a human being is conceived. The zygote then makes its way to the endometrium, where it should be able to implant. However, due to the thinning of the endometrium’s lining, the zygote typically cannot implant and an abortion is caused without the woman ever knowing she was pregnant.
