A MESSAGE FROM OUR PRIESTS

Father Joseph, Father Louis and Father Albino

Most people find difficult not to react of vengeance to anyone and to anything that does hurtful to them. Nobody feels good if someone is attacking against their life.

Jesus in today's gospel clarifies us that it is possible and he highly recommends his disciples not response violence against violence. His followers should not practice hatred and vengeance even to their enemy as he said "to you...I say, love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, bless those who curse you, pray for those who mistreat you. To the person who strikes you on one cheek, offer the other as well, and from the person who takes your cloak, do not withhold even your tunic"(Lk. 6:27-29).

If we do this, then we are truly Jesus' obedient people and proud to be called his faithful disciples.

ASK A CATHOLIC

Why is the Lord's Prayer (Matthew 6:9-14) different in the Catholic Bible compared to the King James Version?

The difference comes down to one verse (13): "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen." This verse is included in the King James Version (KJV) but not in most Catholic Bibles.

The reason for this comes down to what manuscripts are being used. The KJV is based on the Textus Receptus. This was produced by Erasmus, who compiled what Greek manuscripts he had access to into a single edition.

However, while the Textus Receptus was very good at unifying what was probably the most common editions of the Greek New Testament, it did not contain the oldest ones. Two manuscripts (Sinaiticus and Vaticanus) that are older than those found in the Textus Receptus do not contain the verse in question.

In addition, the tradition on the matter is mixed. While the Didache and the Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom do contain the doxology, the commentaries on the Lord's Prayer by Tertullian, Origen, and Cyprian do not include it.

St. Jerome's Latin Vulgate did not include it, and therefore any Catholic Bible based upon the Vulgate also would not include it. In modern times, while the Vulgate is not used by most Catholic Bibles as a foundational source, the fact that the doxology is not included in the oldest manuscripts results in its exclusion.

Article: Homosexual Behavior Part 1

By Nate Guyer (Part 6 of 9)

Question: "If two people love each other then why can't they get married? How does same-sex marriage affect you?"

Answer: I love my mom, dad, brothers, sisters and, to a lesser extent, the family dog, but I would never marry them, nor should I be allowed. Although love is an important component of any successful marriage, love is commonly found in other types of relationships as well. The difference between other relationships and marriage is exclusivity and sexual unity ordered toward procreation and child rearing. Marriage itself is preparation for that unity and potential procreation. Since man and woman each have half of a complete reproductive system, any other form of sexual unity (e.g. man and man, woman and woman, human and beast) is incompatible with marriage. Since any potential child has only one set of parents, polygamy (a man with multiple wives) and polyandry (a woman with multiple husbands) are also incompatible with marriage. "Marriage is valuable in itself, but its inherent orientation to the bearing and rearing of children contributes to its distinctive structure, including norms of monogamy and fidelity." Further, "marriage involves a comprehensive union of spouses. Something that cannot occur in same-sex "marriages." There can be no organic (of the organs) union between same-sex partners. "Our organs...are parts of one body because they are coordinated, along with other parts, for a common biological purpose of the whole: our biological life. It follows that for two individuals to unite organically, and thus bodily, their bodies must be coordinated for some biological purpose of the whole," even if that purpose is not always fulfilled (i.e. a child does not have to be conceived every time a man and woman have sex).

Same-sex "marriage" affects me, because "abolishing the conjugal conception of marriage would weaken the social institution of marriage, obscure the value of opposite-sex parenting as an ideal, and threaten moral and religious freedom." It devalues what marriage actually is. If a person was allowed to "marry" anyone or anything at any time, marriage would become a joke. Unfortunately, this is already the case among many in our society. If the state began to recognize same-sex "marriages," "no civil institution would any longer reinforce the notion that children need both a mother and father; that men and women on average bring different gifts to the parenting enterprise; and that boys and girls need and tend to benefit from fathers and mothers in different ways."

Note: When referring to same-sex "marriage," marriage is in quotations because there is no such thing as same-sex "marriage." Marriage does not and cannot exist outside of its naturally ordered context. Further, the Bible and the Catechism are replete with prohibitions regarding homosexual behavior. One can have homosexual inclinations/attractions, but just like any other sin, one cannot act on these inclinations. If one acts on these inclinations, as with any other mortal sin, one must avail himself of the sacrament of reconciliation and "sin no more."
