Today we celebrate the greatest of all Christian feasts: Easter Sunday. We come together rejoicing in the goodness of God, knowing that Christ's resurrection from the dead gives us the hope that we too will rise someday with him.

And yet, this one Sunday of the year should not be our only day of rejoicing in our risen Lord. We take on the identity of an "Easter people" because we believe that each Sunday echoes the greatest of all Christian feasts. Each Sunday we celebrate "mini-Easters," remembering in a special way the day the Lord rose so that we might have life.

Just like the early Christians, we have the hope that the God who made us is waiting to remake us through the incredible transforming love of Jesus. This love, which culminated in his Passion and Resurrection, can and should convert our hearts to joyful praise. Just as Mary Magdalene's heart changed from sorrow to joy when she encountered her risen Lord, so are we called to enter into that same joyful spirit as we approach Christ risen this Easter—the spirit of a new creation.
