Discernment project

April 16, 2023

When I first read this question, I didn't know how to answer it. However, as I thought about it, I decided to believe that God is omnipresent. During spring, all the plants are growing and starting to look beautiful and amazing. This is all God's work, He creates some of the most beautiful things in our world. One of his most prized creations is people. I have met many people in my life, most of them were very kind, but there were a few interesting people. Some examples of people with kind hearts are my family. My whole family is Catholic, so they talk about God all the time and help many others in their lives. When I see people really smile, that's when I believe that God is showing. My friends that I have had since elementary are also good examples. They have stuck with me and almost talk to me about everything.

When I did my service hours, I felt as if I was helping a lot of people and bringing joy. At the St. Patrick's dinner at St. Pius, I had conversations with many kind people. They asked why I was doing this. I said that I was doing it because it was a kind thing to do and help others when they needed it. This helped me connect to God because I was helping these people with things that were hard for them to do by themselves.

I also see Him when the sun sets and rises because it is his artwork that he makes for us. God is with us in everything we do, especially at the hardest times in our lives. When I graduated middle school and went to high school, I was really nervous and I didn't know if I was ready. Thinking of God and praying to him really helped me like the school and be motivated. Most recently, my Grandma has passed away, and I can tell that God has been with me this whole time.

She was a true Catholic. She was where I found God the most, and when she passed, it felt as if he left for a while, but as I thought about my grandma it felt as if God was coming back into my life.
