Abortion battle heads to Supreme Court

The pro-life movement stresses the importance of pregnant women's safety and health. They also point out that abortion providers shouldn't have "third-party standing," or the ability to represent patients in a case where their interests and women's interests might conflict. They also argue that Louisiana physicians at ambulatory surgical centers must obtain the same admitting privileges – and that abortion providers aren't being singled out here.

OB-GYNs have come out in support of the bill authored by a woman: Democratic Louisiana state senator Katrina Jackson.

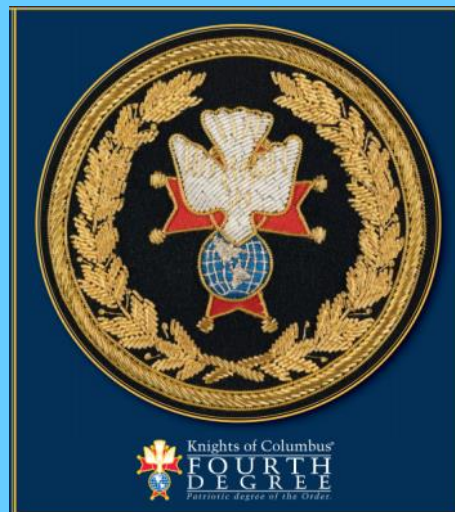

"For those who say, 'You're limiting the ability to access abortion,'" she told the National Catholic Register in January, "I would tell them it doesn't lessen access to an abortion, it lessens access to unsafe abortion, and unsafe, unregulated abortions are not constitutional."

The New York Times Lauren Kelley, "Worst-case scenario" a "real possibility" – where abortion clinics may "no longer be able to bring lawsuits on behalf of their patients" in addition to shuttering clinics nationwide.
