MESSAGE FROM THE FAITHFUL NAVIGATOR

Halloween..... a Holy Day?

When neighborhood kids don spooky costumes and go door to door shouting “trick-or-treat,” you may not see a Catholic tradition in action. Yet from a focus on the spirits of the dead to the very name of Halloween itself, the origins of the October 31 holiday are deeply rooted in our Catholic faith.

The word “hallow” itself is an archaic word for “saint,” so we can start by remembering that the holiday is named in relation to a holy day – Halloween is short for All Hallows’ Eve, i.e., the eve of All Saints’ Day (also called All Hallows’ Day).

Looking more closely at our Catholic tradition, we see that October 31 is the beginning of a three-day observance of “All-Hallowtide” – Halloween, All Saints’ Day (Nov. 1) and All Souls’ Day (Nov. 2). The focus of these celebrations is on the dead, those who have gone before us to the grave, and the three days should remind us of our own mortality and the inevitable end of our time on earth. Yet the Church also reminds us that as Catholics we are all about life, in this case eternal life, as the celebration of All Saints’ and All Souls’ proclaim.

On Nov. 1, we pray for the intercession of those who have entered into the happiness of heaven, the canonized saints as well as the hidden holy ones who also rejoice in God’s presence. As Catholics, we must remember that to be a saint is to be with God in heaven, so we hope all our departed loved ones will be saints, and that in due time we will be one as well. On Nov. 2, we pray for the souls in purgatory, those who are passing through a time of spiritual purification in preparation for heaven. Whatever suffering they undergo is taken with the sure knowledge that they are among the saved who are preparing to enter into the presence of God. All Saints’ and All Souls’ Days place the fact of death squarely before our eyes, yet always in the context of the eternal life that will be ours if we live according to God’s grace and commands.
