REFLECTING ON THE READINGS

ALLELUIA IS OUR SONG!

We are an Easter people and Alleluia is our song. These are not my words but those of the great St. Augustine, bishop of Hippo, spoken some 1500 years ago at the Easter liturgy. Although they were spoken in a different language, at a different time and certainly in a different world, the faith which they profess is the same as the one we embrace this Easter morning. We are an Easter people and Alleluia is our song. We would be hard pressed to find a better lens through which to perceive the meaning of Easter than this faith assertion of Augustine. Because as we gather today after 40 days of Lent, after remembering Jesus' last meal with the apostles, after reflecting on his unjust death, two questions are important ones for us to address. Why are we an Easter people? How do we sing our Alleluia song?

Why are we an Easter people? Because it is Easter that sets us apart from every other believer. It is Easter that distinguishes us from other good and moral people throughout our world. As Christians we believe that something happened on that first Easter morning. We believe that Jesus of Nazareth who suffered a cruel and unjust death, was raised up and glorified by the power of God. We believe that Jesus became for us the way to salvation. We believe that Jesus' death and resurrection is a pattern for our own life. This explains why Easter is not simply good news for Jesus, but good news for us as well. For you and I believe that we who are united to Christ through faith and baptism will ourselves be raised up and glorified. St. Paul says this so clearly in his letter to the Romans. "If we have been united with him in a death like his, we will certainly be united with him in a resurrection like his."

Resurrection and glory are a reality for Jesus. For us they remain a promise. Yet the reality of Jesus' resurrection and glorification is the guarantee of our promise. Because we believe that if God destroyed the evil of Jesus' life and vindicated him from death, God will do the same for us. Believing this is not always easy. We can doubt, as did the apostles on that first Easter morning, whether the announcement of the women from the tomb is just an idle tale. But for those of us who are gifted by faith, for those of us who claim the truth of the resurrection that truth becomes an anchor for our lives. This is why Christians are always moving from faith to hope. From faith that Christ was in fact raised and glorified to hope that the same will occur to us. From faith in believing that Jesus was has been raised up to hope that there is no pain, no failure, no hurt that is so great that the love and power of God cannot conquer it. This is why Christians should be able to hope in every situation. For if God was loving and powerful enough to raise one person from the dead, then we believe that nothing can separate us from God's love and power to save us.

Easter then is our identity. We are an Easter people. But how then do we sing our Alleluia song? There are many ways to sing Alleluias. We can sing them with our eyes open or with our eyes shut. The gospel, however, calls us to sing with eyes open. Even as we proclaim Christ's victory, we keep our eyes open to the evil that still remains in our world. Even as we proclaim Christ's victory we do not deny the weaknesses in our own life, our addictions and our need to grow. Even as sing the glories of Easter we admit that injustice and violence remains in our world. The Alleluias we sing do not deny that evil that remains in our world. They proclaim Easter joy in the midst of darkness, announcing to a broken world the promise of Christ's final victory that is still to come.

If we sing our Alleluias with eyes open, then we are certainly impelled to be people of compassion and service. For the Risen One who we proclaim is one who knew pain and suffering. If we follow him, we cannot distance ourselves from those that suffer, from those that are marginalized in our society. Instead we see in the suffering of those around us a reflection of the suffering of Christ. Such recognition leads us to service. For the victory we proclaim is one in which we are called to participate. We contribute through our service of others to the building of God's kingdom.

So we sing our Alleluias with our eyes open to all that remains wrong in our world and at the same time are moved to be people of compassion and service to establish God's reign. We are an Easter people and Alleluia is our song. So as we gather together on this Easter weekend we claim Christ's resurrection and what that resurrection means for our own glorification. We face the world around us without denial and recommit ourselves both to compassion and to service.
