Father had great compassion for his many good workers, but he felt these activities necessary to continue the deep parish bond that always existed in St. Mary's, and that it helped acquaint the new members with the old, for he felt that nothing got people better acquainted with each other than working together. Father was never one for compliments, and blarney was foreign to his nature, but he was deeply grateful as he thanked all his willing workers – not for this one activity alone, but all they had done through the years.

According to Bishop Muench, St. Mary's was the first parish to take up a collection to help the poor. This collection was listed on the financial report, of which a copy is sent to the Chancery office in Fargo. In examining the report the first year of the Bishop's arrival in the Diocese, this item was questioned and explained by Father. Bishop Muench wrote he had never heard of a collection of this kind, but thought it an excellent idea and complimented him highly for it. The collection for the poor of the parish was started during the first days of depression, in order that "those who had a little show their thanks by giving to those not so fortunate," and was continued until Father's retirement.
