

As Catholics, we have extensive social teachings that stretch back through many popes from Pope Leo XIII in the late nineteenth century to Pope Francis today. These perspectives are drawn from reflection on the scriptural witness to justice and the Kingdom of God as well as from the teaching tradition that has developed from application of the Catholic Church's reflection over the centuries. Here is a guide drawn from this reservoir of teaching to help us as Catholics know the broad range of teachings and the prioritization we need to consider when applying our faith to how we vote:
