

Prison Well

The prison well. At the time this well was drilled, the prison was having to truck water in order to attempt to furnish water for drinking, cleaning and cooking for 250 inmates. The already difficult and overcrowded situation was made much worse by the lack of sufficient potable water. Thanks to Seton Law School for funding this incredibly important well. The conditions in the prison have vastly improved now that there is an unlimited supply of water. There is also a spicket on the outside of the prison from which the neighborhood can access water at designated times of the day.
