SEPTEMBER 3, 2023 THE TWENTY-SECOND SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Dear friends,

Situational Awareness. That's a term you'll find many people using. It has to do with being aware of your environment and all the people in that environment. Good leaders are ones who notice things and understand how they might impact the things you are trying to do or trying to prevent.

Jesus talked about situational awareness as well. Now, he didn't use those exact words. Instead he talked about how we must learn to "stay awake," to "be prepared." He was constantly trying to get the disciples to develop "situational awareness," and bemoaning the times when they didn't seem to be able to do this. Recall his words in the Garden of Gethsemane when he asked the disciple to "stay awake and pray." When he returned and found them asleep, we hear him say, "could you not stay awake and keep watch with me?"

Paying attention, staying awake, situational awareness are all very human realities. And because they are so human, we often don't think they have anything to do with religion or faith. But nothing could be farther from the truth. Learning how to notice things around us and being aware of the feelings that get trigger us is at the heart of our faith life. The saints often spoke about this as "contemplation." And they would tell us that learning how to live a contemplative life is what we are all called to do.

My bet is that most people would dismiss any notion of living a contemplative life. That is something monks and nuns who live in monasteries do. It's way beyond anything I might be able to do. But the contemplative way of life is so called because it's the way of life devoted to the cultivation of contemplative experience. That's our starting place. To contemplate means to observe carefully, to pay close attention. Most of the things that we notice, we notice in passing, on our way to something else; then, every so often, something gives us reason to pause. Something catches our eye or draws our attention, and we're drawn for a moment to ponder or to reflect on that which awakened us in this way. These moments pass and the real question then for us is, "What happens next?" All too often, unfortunately, nothing happens next. The gate to Heaven opened and your cell phone went off. You were already late to a meeting. Nothing happened next. But sometimes what happens is that although the moment has passed, you reflect back upon it, and you realize that the subtle moment was an encounter with God. That is "situational awareness" at its finest.

I've been wondering just how to teach people to have this "situational awareness." I think it begins young. And it begins with simple things. Now that school is back in session I have been encouraging, cajoling and sometimes even nagging our students to notice things around them. Things like the trash that is lying on the floor that can be picked up and put in the wastebasket. Things like picking up the water bottle that I left in the gym. Things like picking up the kickball that was left in the playground area and returning it to its proper place.

Situational awareness also means turning out the lights and turning off the air-conditioning in rooms that are no longer being used. Not only does this help us reduce our utility bill, but it also helps us develop an ability to be aware of things around me. There is a straight line from these simple ways of noticing to those "holy moments" when we are aware of God in our life.

I'd like to believe there is a purpose to my "nagging" and "cajoling" others, as initiating as it might seem to others. I'd like to think that when we can be aware of such simple things, then we can move on to being aware of the suffering of those around us. And if we can do that, perhaps we can move on to being aware of the goodness of people who may not see the world the way I do, or believe the way I believe. And if we can do this, perhaps we can then be aware of the people facing famine and starvation throughout the world.

It all begins when we choose to embrace a contemplative way of life. It's learning to do what Jesus told us to do when he say "stay awake, pay attention"

Leaning into the journey of life

SITUATIONAL AWARENESS

For My Young Friends Who Are Afraid

There is a country to cross
you will find in the corner of your eye,
in the quick slip of your foot
—air fardown,

a snap that might have caught.

And maybe for you, for me,

a high, passing voice
that finds its way
by being afraid.

That country is there, for us,
carried as it is crossed.

What you fear will not go away:

it will take you into yourself
and bless you and keep you.

That's the world,
and we all live there.

—William Stafford

CARING FOR OUR COMMON HOME

In this year of Eucharistic Renewal, we continue reading Pope Francis's teaching letter (encyclical) entitled Laudato Si'—Caring for Our Common Home

When questions about the environment and the economy arise, some react by accusing others of pretending to irrationally stop human progress and development. But we must be convinced that slowing down a certain pace of production and consumption can give rise to another mode of progress and development.

Efforts for a sustainable use of natural resources are not a useless expense, but an investment that may offer other economic benefits in the medium term. If we are not restricted in our views, we can discover that the diversification of a more innovative production with a lower environmental impact can be very profitable. It is about opening the way to different opportunities, which do not imply stopping human creativity and its dream of progress, but rather channeling that energy in a new way.

For example, a more creative and better oriented path of productive development could correct the disparity between the excessive technological investment for consumption and the scarce one to solve the urgent problems of humanity. It could generate intelligent and profitable forms of reuse, functional recovery and recycling; it could improve the energy efficiency of cities; and so on.

Productive diversification offers vast possibilities for human intelligence to create and innovate, while protecting the environment and creating more job opportunities. This would be a creativity capable of making the nobility of the human being flourish again, because it is more dignified to use intelligence, with audacity and responsibility, to find forms of sustainable and equitable development, within the framework of a broader conception of the quality of life.

In any case, if in some cases sustainable development will involve new ways of growing, in other cases, in the face of the greedy and irresponsible growth that has been produced for many decades, it is also necessary to think about slowing down a bit, to put some reasonable limits and also to go back before it's late.

We know that the behavior of those who consume and destroy more and more is unsustainable, while others still fail to live in conformity with their human dignity. This is why the time has come to accept a certain degrowth in some parts of the world by providing resources so that we can grow healthily in other parts. Benedict XVI said that "it is necessary that technologically advanced societies be willing to favor behaviors characterized by sobriety"

In order for new models of progress to arise we need to change the global development model which implies reflecting responsibly on the meaning of the economy and its purpose, in order to correct its dysfunctions and distortions.

WE'RE LOOKING FOR PEOPLE WHO WANT TO SPONSOR A CHILD'S EDUCATION IN HAITI

Each year our Haiti Outreach Committee seeks new sponsors to join our group of generous people who are sponsoring a child's education in Haiti. We are always looking for new people to match up with the children in St. James Parish in Haiti.

A person or family can sponsor a student for an annual cost of $400, or just $33 per month. This fee helps pay for their tuition, provide a stipend for uniforms and books, helps fund the daily food program and allows the students to have access to the parish clinic.

If you would like more information, you can contact Eric Refett, the coordinator of our student sponsorship program. (812-618-5945) or email him at ereffett@sbcgobl.net

OPPORTUNITY TO DEEPEN YOUR FAITH

Many member of St. Joseph Parish speak of the benefit of having been part of a Cursillo weekend. This faith sharing movement is to form small groups of Christians who meet in a friendship group to share their lives as Christians. A four-day encounter is a part of the movement that prepares the Christian to live out his or her faith.

There are two Cursillo weekends for Men and Women coming up. The first, for men, will be held on September 7 -10 and the second for women on October 26-29. Contact the parish office for information about signing up for the weekend, or sign up online at www.evansvillecursillo.com
