Next Sunday's Readings: Wisdom 9:13-18b; Philemon 9-10, 12-17; Luke 14:25-33

Reflection: The virtue of humility is extolled throughout today's readings. Sirach teaches, "Humble yourself the more, the greater you are, and you will find favor with God" (Sirach 3:18). The psalmist writes that God makes a home for the poor, orphans, widows, prisoners, and the forsaken. Though not directly mentioning humility, the author of Hebrews alludes to the signs of the old and new covenants, which leave us humbled. Finally, Jesus teaches the Pharisees that God exalts those who humble themselves. May God's word inspire us to embrace humility.

Jesus issues two challenges to the people at the banquet: one to the guests and one to the host. To his fellow guests, he warns them about taking places of honor and advises them to exercise humility. This is consistent with his message last week that for God some who are last will be first and vice versa. Even those of us who have achieved some success are not entitled to always getting our way or assuming that we are always right. We are called to exercise humility. After all, no one truly knows where they stand with God.

Meanwhile, the challenge Jesus issues to his host is to invite those who cannot reciprocate. Reach out to those on the margins of society. This is consistent with the beatitudes, which laud the poor, the meek, the unjustly persecuted, the shunned. How much more would it mean to someone such as this to be invited, whether to a dinner, to receive a gift, or even to offer an opinion, than to someone who has grown to expect such invitations! On this Labor Day weekend, let us commit ourselves to work to lift up those who find themselves forsaken by society and others, for in them we can find the Lord.

Even though a table featuring bread and wine is at the focal point of our liturgy, we sometimes forget that this Mass is a banquet. Has our parish invited all those who could be invited? Have you? One job of a disciple is to call others to follow as well. We are called to bring the Good News to those who have not heard it or have not realized its richness, inviting them to join us.

Question of the Week

When have I realized too late that I should have exercised some humility? What have I learned when exercising humility?
