Deacon John Hust

This weekend I think it is an important part of our faith to take time to reflect on God's word (commands) to us. God knows that we are a broken people and left to ourselves we are unable to gain eternal life with God. The following scriptures from Sirach reminds us of the free will God has given us. We have a choice to follow God and his ways or follow the path into darkness.

"Before man are life and death, good and evil, whatever he chooses shall be given him."

"If you choose you can keep the commandments and they will save you."

Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of the Father, through His life, death and resurrection provides the grace for us to choose wisely to follow the commandments God gives us. The ten commandments are still a path to holiness. The first three commandments deal with loving God and the last three deal with loving neighbor. In the gospel Jesus says, "I came not to abolish the Law but to fulfill it."

In our society and culture many people are embracing behaviors that are contrary to God's commandments. It was the same for many during Sirach's time. Through Sirach, God reminds the people that choices have results. In the Gospel Jesus sets a higher standard for us to follow in our Christian life. Jesus says, "If you are angry with your brother, you are liable for Judgement and everyone who looks at a woman with lust, has already committed adultery in his heart." These are challenging words for us.

Jesus says in John 14:15, "If anyone loves Me, he will keep my word
"(Commandments)

Love is willing the good of another. God gives us the commandments so we might grow in Love for God and neighbor. God wills our good through his word (commands) and the Church.

We are looking for some help with some little projects for the next Christmas Play.

- 1) We need to have new angel wings made. They are starting to show their age.
- 2) We are looking for someone to help build a manger that can collapse and be stored easily.

Please let me know if you are able to help with either one of these projects.

Thank you!
