Old Business

The new pattern for communion is working pretty well. It is a more efficient way of distributing communion. There are some minor issues with the choir which the choir will take care of.

The gluten-free hosts seem to be working well also. Deacon Allen has been taking to those who need gluten-free and they are pleased. The priest will always be the person with the gluten-free hosts.

Deacon Allen is going to deal with the issue of when one person distributing the precious blood runs out. The first should leave and go back up to the altar. The second one needs to stay even if they run out so that communicants can reverence the cup.

Mike S. creates a schedule ahead of time. At North Lake there will be a tablet in the sacristy that will have the updated ministry changes so that people will know someone is missing. Ministers who make schedule changes outside of the system should email Mike so that he can update the schedule. The schedule will no longer be posted on the bulletin board in the sacristy.

New Business

Jim Steinhart and Brian Walsh are getting together to work on the system for video in Clare Hall for Easter. The system did not work will for Christmas.

For Palm Sunday Kay is planning to have the blessing of the palms in the gathering space.

Plans for the Triduum are attached. There will be practices for participants in each of the services. Kay is waiting to hear from Fr Pederu to see when these practices will be scheduled.

Kay wanted to remind us of the Parish Mission and the Lenten Speakers. Information is in the bulletins and in the newsletter.

The new Divine Mercy prints are here. The one at North Lake is up near the organ console.
The adoration cross will be in the back of church at North Lake starting Ash Wednesday.
