*The bread that we break,
is it not a participation

Because the loaf

we, though many,

- ◆ “Do this in memory of me.”
- ◆ Six ways we can be actively engaged in the Mass
- ◆ The killing of George Floyd

“Do this in memory of me.” Reflecting on these words of Jesus, Dom Gregory Dix, OSB, in his book The Shape of the Liturgy writes:

Was ever another command so obeyed? For century after century, spreading slowly to every continent and country and among every race on earth, this action has been done in every conceivable human circumstance for every conceivable human need, from infancy and before it, to extreme old age and after it, from the pinnacle of earthly greatness to the refuge of fugitives in the caves and dens of the earth. Men have found no better thing than this to do for kings at their crowning and for criminals going to the scaffold; for armies in triumph or for a bride and bridegroom in a country church...for the famine of a whole province or for the soul of a dear lover... and best of all, week by week, and month by month, on a hundred thousand Sundays, faithfully, unflinchingly, across all the parishes of Christendom, priest and people continue to work together in order to carry out this command, “Do this in memory of me.”

From this beautiful reflection on the Lord’s command, one can readily see how important and central the Mass has been to Catholic life down through the ages. In the words, “Do this in memory of me,” Jesus commanded the Apostles and their successors to repeat his Eucharistic actions and words, “until he comes again” (1Cor 11:26).

Real Presence of Christ in the Eucharist

In the sacred species of bread and wine, Christ comes to us in the fullest possible expression and communication of his love. “Since the Middle Ages, the changing of bread and wine into the Body and Blood of Christ has been called ‘transubstantiation.’ This means that the substance of the bread and wine is changed into the substance of the Body and Blood of Christ. The appearances of bread and wine remain (color, shape, weight, chemical composition), but the underlying reality—that is, the substance—is now the Body and Blood of Christ” (United States Catholic Catechism, p.223). What looks and tastes like bread and wine is now filled or taken over with the presence of our Divine Savior. An early Father of the Church, St. John Damascene, wrote: “If anyone wishes to know how the bread is changed into the Body of Christ at Mass, I will tell him. The Holy Spirit overshadows the priest and acts on him as he acted on the Blessed Virgin Mary, when the angel Gabriel visited her.” During the Eucharist Prayer of the Mass, the priest prays: “Let your Spirit come upon these gifts to make them holy so that they may become the Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

Six behaviors that express full and active participation in the Mass

In the Constitution on the Liturgy (a Vatican II document), the Council Fathers prescribe the “full and active participation by all the people [as] the aim to be considered before all else” (14).

Concretely, what does full and active participation in the Mass involve? The following are six behaviors that help us to be full and active participants at Mass. As you read them, you can ask yourself to what extent you embody these behaviors.

Behavior #1: Punctuality. Getting to Church at least ten minutes before Mass begins gives us some time to prepare ourselves spiritually for the wonderful and sacred event that is about to happen. Ideally, we should not be chatting before Mass. We can do that after Mass.

Reflection questions: Do you normally get to Church a few minutes before Mass begins? If so, to what extent do you use the time to prepare your mind and heart for worship?

Behavior #2: Spirit of hospitality. Everyone enjoys coming to a place where there is a spirit of warmth and hospitality. This includes the place we call Church. It has been said that warm prayerful congregations attract people. Cold, unprayerful and distracted congregations drive people away. A spirit of hospitality does not mean a lot of chatter before Mass but rather an attitude that says to those around us: “I am glad to see you.” A simple “Good Morning” or a smile communicates a spirit of hospitality.

The Church speaks of four presences of Christ in the Eucharist: in the congregation, in the presider, in the proclamation of the Word and, most of all, in the Eucharist. We can say that we help the presence of Christ in the congregation to come alive when we are hospitable to those around us and when we are prayerfully engaged in the Mass. Conversely, we hinder the presence of Christ from coming alive in the congregation when we are unfriendly, distracted, and not engaged in the Mass.

Reflection question: To what extent are you a hospitable and prayerful presence at Mass?

Behavior #3: Active participation in the song and prayer of the Mass. Prior to his conversion to Christianity, St. Augustine used to come and sit in the back of the Church while the Mass was going on. Concerning the singing, Augustine wrote:

*How I wept, deeply moved by your hymns, songs,
and the voices that echoed through your Church!
What emotion I experienced in them!
Those sounds flowed into my ears,
distilling the truth in my heart.
A feeling of devotion surged within me,
and tears streamed down my face—
tears that did me good.*

(Catechism of the Catholic Church, 1157)

Augustine's words speak to the power of music and song to touch hearts. When it comes to Church music, all of us have different tastes (and some of us were absent when God was passing out the singing voice!). Having said that, all of us should do the best we can to enter into the song and prayer of the Mass.

An important part of active participation in the Mass is joining in the sung prayer of the congregation (notice the term "sung prayer"). Ideally, at Mass we don't just sing the songs, but we pray the songs. We do this by paying attention to the lyrics of the song and making an effort to lift our minds and hearts to God during our singing.

Reflection questions: Do you actively participate in the sung prayer of the congregation at Mass? Even when you don't like the song or don't know it, do you still try to sing it? To what extent are you aware that your participation or lack of participation in the singing impacts the quality of the worship that we give to God?

Behavior #4: Attentive listening. At times during Mass, we are called to be active listeners. This is especially so during the proclamation of the Scriptures and the homily which follows. Attentive listening during Mass is not easy. It demands a real effort on our part, particularly when the readings are difficult to understand and the homily does not engage us. Nevertheless, we are called to do our best to tune out other voices seeking our attention and to tune in to the Word of God. A helpful preparation for anyone to hear God's Word during Mass might be going over my weekly commentary on the readings, which may be found on our parish website. You might even consider downloading the commentary and bringing it to Mass to read over before our celebration of the Eucharist begins.

The purpose of the homily is to connect the readings, at least one of them, to our daily lives. I often pray for the deacons and priests who will be preaching in our churches throughout the world this coming weekend. I invite you to do the same. During the Liturgy of the Word, our prayer should be: "Lord, help me to hear the word you want me to hear today." This simple prayer expresses our desire to be attentive to God's Word.

Reflection question: Do you normally make a real effort to tune in to the readings and message proclaimed at Mass?

Behavior #5: Spirit of generosity. The following are four ways that we can allow a spirit of generosity to impact the way we participate in the Eucharist.

- Getting to Church on time and remaining until the end of the final song is an act of giving one's time to the Lord. Coming late and/or leaving early is being stingy with the Lord.
- Giving of ourselves to the songs and prayers of the Mass
- Giving of our financial resources to the Church during the collection
- Bringing food to Church on the first Sunday of the month for our Food Pantry.

Reflection question: Are you an active participant at Mass or a silent spectator?

Behavior #6: Spirit of thanksgiving. At each Mass we participate in, we come primarily to give of ourselves and not to receive. Though of course in our giving, we will receive. When we come to Mass with a "what's in it for me" attitude, we are bringing a consumerist mentality into the house of God.

Our behavior at Mass is contagious. It is important to remember that our behavior at Mass is contagious. When we are hospitable to those around us—sing enthusiastically, pray devoutly, listen attentively to the readings and homily, place our money offering in the basket, receive the Body and Blood of Christ with love and faith, move with a sense of reverence that reflects awareness that we are on holy ground—we demonstrate that we are participating in something very important, and our good example may impact those around us more than we can ever imagine. On the contrary, when we miss Mass for no good reason, we give a poor example to our family and others. When we come rushing into Mass, show no hospitality to those around us, behave in a distracted and uninvolved manner, or leave early, we diminish the whole worship atmosphere. We communicate to others that “the Mass is not important; I’m bored and not mentally here.”

Connecting Liturgy and Life

“One cannot be truly engaged in the liturgy if they are not engaged in life. One supports the other.”

(Clara Dina Hinojosa)

It would seem that some people who attend Mass on Sunday see little connection between what happens in Church and what happens in their homes, neighborhoods, and workplaces. For many people, their “Thanks be to God” at the end of Mass may literally mean, “Thank God, our Sunday obligation is taken care of; now let’s get back to business as usual.” Too few people are aware that the time spent in the world can be a means of personal sanctification just like the time spent in personal and communal prayer. Separation of worship and life, of the sacred and the secular, is a perennial danger in Christian spirituality. It is too easy for us to lose sight of the beautiful fact that the Jesus who leads us in worship on Sunday is also at work in the kitchens and offices of life, seeking to build there “a kingdom of truth, justice, love and peace” (Preface, Feast of Christ the King).

At Mass we celebrate the Paschal Mystery of Jesus, i.e., his dying and rising, his passage back to the Father. But it is in our homes, neighborhoods, shopping centers, workplaces, etc., that we live the Paschal Mystery. It is in these places that we literally enter into (or fail to enter into) the death and Resurrection of Jesus. We enter into and share in the dying of Jesus when we are called to die to ourselves and our desires, when we experience rejection or misunderstanding, when we are gossiped about and treated unjustly, when we struggle with pain, sickness, old age, evil and death. We enter into the dying of Jesus when we struggle with painful relationships at home, at work and at play. But we enter into the victory and Resurrection of Jesus every time we make a decision to love, to give and receive forgiveness, to do what we can to change what can be changed and accept patiently what cannot be changed. We enter into and share in the victory and Resurrection of Jesus every time we let go of bitterness, jealousies, small-mindedness, and all the things that block us from communicating and experiencing the oneness of spirit that we pray for at Mass. All of the above examples and many others give us multiple opportunities to daily die and rise with Christ.

The authenticity and integrity of our weekly celebration of the Paschal Mystery will be in direct relationship to our efforts to live the Paschal Mystery in the hustle and bustle of daily life. If our daily lives reflect little of the dying and rising of Christ, then we can be sure that our Sunday celebration of those events, however devoutly attended or beautifully celebrated, will be of little interest to our Lord. In fact, he may well say of us: “These people honor me with their lips but their hearts are far from me” (Mark 7:6). “Full, conscious and active participation” does not just refer to liturgy but to all of life. Full, conscious and active participation refers to our relationships at home, work and recreation. It applies to our response to God who is present and active in every aspect of our lives. Full, conscious and active participation means that we give ourselves totally to whatever we are doing at any particular moment.

When we come to Mass on Sunday, we bring with us to the altar of God our efforts, however fragile, to live the Paschal Mystery.

In his book, This is Our Faith, Michael Pennock writes: The Mass eloquently reminds us that communal worship must never be focused on itself. When we “break bread” in the name of Jesus, we are celebrating our brotherhood and sisterhood and receiving the source of our life, the Lord Jesus. In this sacred meal, he reminds us to take him out into the world, a world that desperately needs his love. We must be broken for others just as he was broken for us. Christian worship that does not translate into service for others is not true worship. Jesus said:

“It is not anyone who says to me, ‘Lord, Lord,’ who will enter the kingdom of Heaven, but the person who does the will of my Father in Heaven.” (Mt 7:21)

The Eucharist reminds us that because we have received the Body of Christ, we must become the body of Christ. We are the Lord’s hands that touch and care for the sick, old and infirm; his feet that walk to meet and befriend the lonely; his understanding eyes that reveal compassion to the hurting and lost in our midst; his voice of power and righteousness to speak out for the marginalized in the cause of justice.

Have a blessed week,

Le Saran

THE KILLING OF GEORGE FLOYD

The killing of George Floyd resurrects old wounds, causes nationwide protests and, hopefully, begins a new conversation about racism.

Some events or scenes remain in our memory for a lifetime e.g., the assassination of President Kennedy, the blowing up of the Twin Towers on 9/11, and now the horrific scene of Police Officer Chauvin's knee on the neck of George Floyd that led to his death. Fortunately, the incident was caught on video; otherwise, it could have been another case of "he says, she says."

Since African Americans came here in chains hundreds of years ago, they have suffered many terrible atrocities, as in the two cases narrated below.

I assume those of us who are white would agree that we have very little or no idea what it was or is like to grow up black—especially a poor black in this country. All forms of racism are morally wrong because they demean another human being.

The following two stories of racial hatred are taken from a book called Blessed Among Us—Day by Day with Sainly Witnesses by Robert Ellsberg.

Medgar Evers (1925-1963) - Civil Rights Martyr

Medgar Evers was born in Decatur, Mississippi. Drafted into the army during World War II, he saw action in France and Germany. Returning to Mississippi after the war, he studied at a historically black college, married his sweetheart, and raised three children. But like many black veterans, Evers found it intolerable to return to segregation and the daily experience of humiliation and oppression. He became a full-time fieldworker for the NAACP - the premier civil rights organization and thus the object of fear and hatred by white supremacists throughout the South.

After organizing boycotts of segregated bathrooms and working to register African Americans to vote, Evers began to receive constant death threats. Though he acknowledged the risks, he refused to compromise. As his wife noted, "Medgar was a man who never wanted to be in the limelight. He saw a job that needed to be done and he answered the call and the fight for freedom, dignity, and justice, not just for his people but all people."

On June 12, 1963, shortly after President Kennedy delivered a historic speech on civil rights, Medgar Evers was shot in the back in the driveway of his home. He died in front of his wife and children.

"I grieve but I do not regret. Medgar didn't just belong to me—he belonged to so many. He was so willing to give his life that I feel his death has served a certain purpose. When I find myself in the pits of depression I remind myself that fulfilling this purpose is what he really wanted."

Martyrs of "Mother Emmanuel" Charleston, South Carolina (2015)

In the evening hours of June 17, 2015, a prayer service at Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Charleston, South Carolina, was interrupted when a young white man drew a gun and began shooting. "Y'all want something to pray about?" he shouted. "I'll give you something to pray about." His violence took the lives of nine people, including the senior pastor, State Senator Clementa Pinckney.

"Mother Emanuel"—one of the oldest African American churches in the country—had a long and storied history of nourishing the faith of its members, sustaining them in the long struggle against racial oppression from slavery times to the present. The church's history, presumably, played a role in the killer's twisted plan to "ignite a race war."

In the days that followed, the country learned more of the faith and goodness of the nine people murdered that day, of how, in different ways, their faith had inspired them to lives of service and ordinary decency. And in the example of family members who confronted the killer in court to voice their pain, along with astonishing expressions of forgiveness, the world witnessed, as President Obama put it, the power of "amazing grace."

Guilty of nothing other than "praying while black," these martyrs highlighted the enduring stain of racism, and among many Americans their deaths prompted self-examination and new resolve to uproot the scourge of racism.

"It was an act that the killer presumed would deepen divisions that trace back to our nation's original sin. Oh, but God works in mysterious ways. God has different ideas."

-President Barack Obama, at the memorial for Rev. Clementa Pinckney

[Robert Ellsberg, Blessed Among Us: Day By Day with Sainly Witnesses, a Give Us This Day book (Collegeville, MN: Liturgical Press, 2016), 347. Used with permission.]

I found the following prayer on the internet (no author was given).

God of justice,
In your wisdom you create all people
in your image, without exception.
Through your goodness, open our eyes to see the dignity, beauty, and worth of every human being.
Open our minds to understand that all your children are brothers and sisters in the same human family.
Open our hearts to repent of racist attitudes,
behaviors, and speech which demean others.
Open our ears to hear the cries of those wounded
by racial discrimination,
and their passionate appeals for change.
Strengthen our resolve to make amends for past injustices and to right the wrongs of history.
And fill us with courage that we might seek to heal wounds, build bridges, forgive and be forgiven, and establish peace and equality
for all in our communities.
In Jesus' name we pray.
Amen.

WHAT IS YOUR DESERT?

Chances are you are not physically wandering in a desert, although millions of people throughout the world live without adequate clean water. All of us experience spiritual and emotional deserts, however. The food that Jesus gives in the Eucharist, his very Body and Blood, soul and divinity, nourish us in our desert moments and strengthen us to live as Christ's people in the world. Partaking in Christ's Body and Blood, we are to live as Christ's people in the world, standing in solidarity with those who are in deserts of their own—physical, spiritual, and emotional. We are called to act as Christ's body, nourishing others through our presence, prayer, and sharing. What is your desert? How does the Eucharist strengthen you as you journey through this dark and sometimes frightening place in life? What deserts of others are you called to address through your caring and sharing as a member of Christ's body, the Church?

Pray the Rosary

Ascension Catholic School Virtual Silent Auction Results

It is good for us to take on new things that we're uncomfortable with, no matter what age we are. Never in my life did I think a 'virtual silent auction' would be something I would understand, much less make it happen without our usual host of volunteers at my side!

Here are some interesting facts about the VSA: 175 people checked in to take a look at the items we had in our silent auction. 133 people became active bidders, and they each did an average of 2.77 bids. Our items, on average, sold for 42% of their value – which is really pretty good because the norm is 40%. The winning bidder for Sister Immaculata's painting, "The Waterfall," was Susan Adams. In the end, thanks to the generosity of our sponsors and folks who purchased tickets to attend the Gala, which would have been held on March 28; we had their donations which came to $21,585. The bidders on the silent auction items brought in another $15,763.

The winning raffle ticket holder for Sister's painting, "Ireland," was Sarah Evans. And we have a wonderful story from Sara. More than 10 years ago, her family met Kim & Mike Tillema in Texas, and they became great friends. Kim (maiden name Ferrane) talked a lot about going to ACS, including stories about the Sisters. At the time, Sara had no idea her little family would someday land up at Ascension. Sara has decided to gift the Tillemas with the painting.

The 26th Annual Gala didn't happen but many people had a hand in preparing for it: there were those who went hunting for items to include; those who donated gift certificates, gift cards, a wide variety of items (some large enough to need a dolly to move, or small enough to adorn your earlobes); those who took pictures and wrapped baskets to have them ready; parishioners and parents and friends who bought tickets and sponsorships; and those who donated money because they believe our students are our future.

The ACS Virtual Silent Auction became a reality because all that groundwork had been laid. From there, Margarite Pecoraro came to my rescue with great creativity and skills in social media. The pictures I took were cleaned up by Margarite, and her sense of adventure and humor helped with our descriptions of the items, Georgette Hoppenbrower did a PSA for us on WDMC.. Alerting you all in that last week in every way possible, was made possible by the help of John Baillie and Betsy Glasenapp, Anita Brady and Heidi Sayut.

God bless you all for the generosity you shared with Ascension Catholic School during this uncertain time.

TREASURES FROM OUR TRADITION

Ordinary Time beckons, and so on this Sunday we surrender the last glimmers of paschal joy as we celebrate the renewal of our life around the table of the Eucharist. This feast reminds us that the goal of the catechumen's journey through Lent is not the baptismal font at Easter, but rather the experience of Pentecost. It is all about life lived in the Spirit's embrace in relationship to the Body of Christ, which is found both "on the table" and "at the table."

The season of confirmation is also drawing to a close, and this feast serves as a reminder that this sacrament, a solemn sending from font to table, is keyed to renewed vigor. Confirmation has sometimes been sadly misunderstood as a kind of graduation from religious formation, but it is nothing of the sort. It is about being led by the Lord Jesus to the place where the Spirit flourishes, and where the gifts of the Spirit are most easily detectable. After next week we will resume our consideration of the sacrament of confirmation, its rich and somewhat tangled history, its challenging theology, and its changing celebration.
